

Code of Ethics

We agree to provide our clients with the most professional services by following these ethics.

- We agree to respect our clients' opinions and religious beliefs, and offer them an area to relax and be themselves without judgment.
- We agree to keep confidential any private information discussed with us by our clients.
- We agree that one can only truly heal themselves and that as a holistic healer we are providing the means for them to attain this goal more easily and naturally.
- We agree to provide our clients with a comfortable and professional setting.
- We agree to inform our clients of all procedures that are involved before any sessions begin.
- We agree to inform clients that holistic healing is not a substitute for professional medical or psychological attention.
- We agree to erase the following "copyrighted" words from our vocabulary while talking and working with our clients: "treat", "cure", "patient", "recommend", "advise", "examine", "prescribe", "dispense", "administer", "diagnose", and any other words that are reserved only to licensed medical doctors by the American Medical Association. Use of these words can lead to being charged with "practicing medicine without a license". We use ourselves as an example (If I felt that way...) and use words such as "client", "blockage", "correct", "imbalance", "evaluation", etc. We can not be prosecuted if we are practicing our spiritual beliefs.
- We agree to take your own health and well-being into account and treat your mind, body, and spirit with love and respect.
- We agree to do our best to provide you information on staying holistically healthy.
- We agree to provide you with the most professional services.
